I'm Dana Yates Sahae, a San Mateo native, parent, community advocate, former journalist, and nonprofit leader. I grew up here, attended San Mateo public schools, and am now raising my family in the community that shaped me.

I spent nearly a decade as a local journalist covering government, public safety, small businesses, and the issues affecting our neighborhoods. That experience taught me to ask tough questions, listen to all sides, follow the facts, and hold government accountable. It also gave me a practical understanding of public policy, city finances, and how decisions at City Hall directly affect our quality of life.

My commitment to San Mateo has continued through years of community service. As a nonprofit executive, District 5 neighborhood leader, and public school PTA president, I've brought people together to solve problems, managed diverse teams and tight budgets, advocated for families and neighborhoods, and worked collaboratively even when opinions differ. I believe good leadership starts with listening — and ends with getting things done.

As your councilmember, I'll focus on the everyday issues that matter to San Mateo residents: keeping our neighborhoods safe, protecting essential city services, maintaining our streets, roads, sidewalks and parks, supporting local businesses, and bringing fiscal discipline to City Hall.

I'll advocate for responsible development that provides needed housing while ensuring our infrastructure, transportation, public safety, schools, local retail and other services can keep pace with growth. San Mateo can plan for its future without sacrificing the qualities that make people want to live here in the first place.

Residents also deserve a City Hall that is accessible, transparent, and responsive. Whether you are trying to resolve a neighborhood problem, open a small business, understand a major development proposal, or simply get an answer from the city, you should know your councilmember is listening and working for you.

I'm running because local government should be about action over ideology. We need leaders who ask questions, consider different perspectives, spend taxpayer dollars carefully, and focus on practical solutions rather than division.

I'm proud to be endorsed by retired State Senator Jerry Hill, San Mateo County Supervisors Jackie Speier and Ray Mueller, and many current and former elected officials, public safety leaders, neighborhood advocates, and community members.

I would be honored to earn your vote and serve as your District 5 Councilmember.
