I love San Mateo and believe our city deserves practical, independent leadership that puts residents first. I have spent my career solving problems, not pursuing politics, and I believe City Hall should listen first, operate transparently, solve problems, and earn public trust through results.

For more than 40 years in the private sector, I have helped cities, counties, states, and the federal government solve transportation, traffic, parking, and infrastructure challenges through innovation, technology, and sound management. As a Business Executive of a technology company, I deliver results through hands-on problem-solving, responsible budgeting, and accountability. Every day, I make decisions that require balancing budgets, competing priorities, managing limited resources, and delivering measurable results—experience I believe is directly relevant to serving on the City Council.

My commitment to San Mateo extends far beyond my professional career. I have devoted thousands of volunteer hours to serving our community through the San Mateo Police Department Neighborhood Watch Program, nonprofit leadership, resident advocacy, and support for senior and youth programs. Those experiences have taught me that progress comes from listening, collaborating, following through, and always putting residents first.

San Mateo is an extraordinary city with tremendous opportunities, but it also faces important challenges. Public safety, fiscal accountability, traffic congestion, infrastructure maintenance, ensuring responsible growth, protecting individual choice, and neighborhood quality of life all deserve thoughtful attention. Before asking taxpayers for more, City Hall must first demonstrate that it is making the best possible use of the resources it already has. I believe City Hall should operate more efficiently, use taxpayer dollars wisely, and be accountable for every dollar it spends. If elected, I will hold City Hall to that standard.

My priorities are straightforward: protecting public safety, exercising fiscal responsibility, maintaining infrastructure, reducing traffic congestion, respecting personal choice, enhancing neighborhood quality of life, and planning responsibly for the future. I believe thoughtful planning means balancing housing, transportation, infrastructure, environmental stewardship, and neighborhood character so that growth strengthens our community rather than diminishes it.

If elected, I will approach every decision with an open mind, a willingness to listen, and a commitment to finding practical solutions that reflect the needs and priorities of our residents. I will work every day to earn your trust by making common-sense decisions that help build A Better San Mateo for current and future generations. I believe San Mateo's best days are still ahead, and I would be honored to help build that future together.
